

News Release from the Brighton and Hove (actually) Gay Men's Chorus
23 November 2009

'Twas the night before Christmas'

Christmas is a hectic time for the popular Brighton and Hove (Actually) Gay Men's Chorus Christmas Concert. Their popular 'Twas the night before Christmas' concert will take place at St Andrew's, Waterloo St on Wednesday 23 December at 7.30 pm. The Lord Lieutenant, The Mayor and The High Sheriff will also attend and read. This is one of many events they will be singing at over the Christmas period.

The Chorus is also delighted to have been invited to perform in London at the Christmas party of the world famous songwriter Guy Chambers on 14 December. Guy Chambers collaborated as songwriter producer and musical director on Robbie Williams' first five solo albums and also co-wrote some of Williams' best known tracks including 'Angels' which is a Chorus favourite.

Musical Director Jason Pimblett said;

'We have a wonderful show at St Andrews this year which will set the scene for the Christmas season. It will include many fond Christmas favourites. There will be some lovely readings as well. So come along for a happy evening with family and friends. But before that we will have the distinct and daunting honour of singing 'Angels' at Guy Chambers party. So we have to be on top form for that as well.'

Last years show at St Andrews was a sell out so get yours soon. Tickets are available from the Dome Box office and from the Iron Duke , Bulldog and Aquarium Theatre bars at £8.00 . This will include mulled wine and mince pie .